POWER PLANT WAGES QUESTION HOLD OVER TILL LATER MEETING

The following are the minutes of a regular meeting of the Town Council held on Friday evening last with Mayor Foster in the chair. All Councilors present except Councilor Telford.

Minutes of the last regular meeting were read and on motion adopted.

Communication from Gorman's Ltd. in reply to the enquiry concerning scavenger dump wages, was on motion of Coun. Robinson ordered filed.

An application was received from Mr. H. McDonald for the leasing of Lot 5, Block 10, Plan 6445V, for the purpose of an auto-wrecking business, accompanied with an option of purchase for the same to Dec. 31st, 1927.

Linsmore-Davison—That the application of Mr. H. McDonald re the purchase of Lot 5, Block 10, Plan 6445V, be accepted on terms as outlined in said application.—Carried.

A deputations from the G.W.V.A. represented by Mr. F. Harrington appeared before Council asking permission to install metal sockets on edge of sidewalks for the purpose of holding flag staffs when used for decorative purposes. Also for permission to hang the charter of the local branch of the Canadian Legion of the British Empire Service League in the Council chamber until such time as they required the same.

Robinson-Welch—That the local G.W.V.A. be allowed to install metal sockets on edge of sidewalks, said sockets to be provided with caps in such a way that there will be no danger of accidents.—Carried.

Davison-Morris—That leave be granted the local branch of the Canadian Legion to hang their charter for the present in the Council chamber.—Carried.

Welch-Robinson—That the secretary purchase two flags from the G.W.V.A. for the purpose of decorating the fire hall at a price of $7.50 each.—Carried.

The chairman of Electric Utility reported having received the following request from the electric light and power staff:

"We your engineer employees of the power house are asking you gentlemen of the Council, your consideration regarding an increase in wages."

"We would like an increase in wages of $25.00 per month for each engineer employee of the power house with two weeks holiday with pay."

"As we are working seven days a week, nine hours per day, and at the present wages we are receiving, is less than common labor wages."

"We are asking the above increase in wages which is about what other plants in this capacity are paying engineers. Please give this matter your consideration and hope to be granted with the above increase in wages, which we will greatly appreciate."

(Signed) John Doss, Supt.
Howard E. Pigeon, 1st eng.
F. W. Wilson, 2nd eng.

We your Council, having received the attached request from the power plant employees for an increase in salary would recommend (a) that Supt. Doss be given an increase of 15% (b) that we inaugurate a salary scale for the 2nd and 3rd engineers as follows:

That first year of employment be at the rate of $100.00 per month.
That second year of employment be at the rate of $112.50 per month.

That third and succeeding years be at the rate of $125.00 per month.
A full discussion having taken place on the above report it was moved by Coun. Linsmore, seconded by Coun. Robinson that the report of the electric utility be tabled until a full attendance of the Council and for further consideration.—Carried.

Morris-Linsmore—That the price of emptying Cess-pools be raised to One Dollar per tank, same to take effect from April 1st, 1927.—Motion Lost.—Councilors Morris and Robinson voting "Yea".

It was agreed by Council that the secretary receive applications for general utility man at his office.

The meeting then adjourned.

JACK TAYLOR MEETS WITH MASTY ACCIDENT WHILE WORKING

On Monday last while at work plastering in the Brunker service station, Mr. Jack Taylor unfortunately fell from a scaffold upon which he was working, and falling upon the concrete floor, had the misfortune to fracture his right arm. He was given immediate attention by Dr. H. Wallace, who at once ceased the patient's suffering, and John is now progressing nicely with his treatment.

CANADIAN RADIO PIONEER ABSORBS U.S. CORPORATION

Toronto, March 9th. A surprise awaited the radio industry today when it became known that Major J. E. Hahn, D. S. O., M. C., pioneer radio manufacturer, and his brilliant group of associates had taken over the Amrad Corporation of Medford Hillside, Boston, Mass.

A few romances hold the intense interest of Major Hahn's extraordinary radio career. Heading the DeForest Radio Corporation of Canada in 1923 in less than four years he has brought this company from comparative obscurity to the leading position it holds today in the industry.

The DeForest Radio Corporation is said to be the largest manufacturer of radio sets in the British Empire. With the acquisition of the Amrad Corporation, Major Hahn now becomes an international figure holding the presidency of both Amrad and the Canadian DeForest Radio Corporation.

In view of the tremendous engineering and research resources, commanded by the Amrad Corporation as well as valuable patent rights, a great stimulus will undoubtedly be given to the Canadian radio industry within the coming year.

"THE TEMPTRESS" IBANEZ NOVEL SHOW FRI. & SAT.

A modern embodiment of the fabled sirens and Lorelei is the role that plays this picture its title, and it would seem that its author, the celebrated Blasco Ibanez, has sought in this character to epitomize the power of feminine beauty to lure men on to destruction.

Using this age-old theme, Ibanez shows us a woman who is vastly different from the familiar stellar roles of the screen, a woman who is neither good nor a deliberate villain, who does not hesitate to utilize her beauty and who realizes the havoc that follows in her wake.

In the hands of Greta Garbo, and under the skillful direction of Fred Niblo the woman emerges as a character that fascinates, despite lack of sympathy. Miss Garbo makes the Temptress vivid, and her fascination for men easily understandable.

The story unfolds in Paris and the Argentine and the atmosphere of both locales is colorful and convincing. The broad sweep of the Argentine plains, the native town, the unique wagons drawn by a score of horses, the singing natives, all add to the fascinating picture and make the dashing, daring bandit and his musical followers seem thoroughly in keeping.

Set in the spirit of the story is the thrilling fight between the bandit and the hero in which the weapons are long Argentine whips which they hail savagely at each other. In more melodramatic vein is the blowing up of the dam, and this serves to introduce effective scenes with the hero spurring his men to repair the damage, and finally laboring alone and being washed away by the flood.

This is made to lead naturally into the scene where he determines to rid the world of the temptress and succumbs to her lure at last and the ending showing her a physical wreck dazed with dope or abstinence is entirely consistent.

Greta Garbo easily dominates the picture, but Antonio Moreno is excellent and handsome as the hero, while Lionel Barrymore is at his best as a Frenchman who kills his best friend in a quarrel over the temptress. The other roles are in capable hands.

GOLF CLUB HOLD ANNUAL MEETING & ELECT OFFICERS

A well attended meeting of the members and well-wishers of the Golf Club was held in the Town Hall on Wednesday evening last, when arrangements for the season's activities were completed.

It was decided to make the necessary repairs and improvements on the links, and that a tournament should be worked out at a later date.

The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows:

Patrons—Mr. and Mrs. J. Mackenzie.

Free—Dr. H. Courcier.

Vice-pres.—Mr. W. G. Hollinshead.

Sec.—Treas.—Mr. G. Hollinshead.

The directors board will formulate a golf course upon which the green working and falling upon the concrete floor, had the misfortune to fracture his right arm. He was given immediate attention by Dr. H. Wallace, who at once ceased the patient's suffering, and John is now progressing nicely with his treatment.

The members are asked to procure their membership cards for the ensuing season as early as possible so that play may commence as soon as the weather is fit to see the links.

The meeting then adjourned.

PLEASANT WHIST DRIVE HELD AT GREENSHIELDS

For the purpose of providing funds to purchase games and equipment for the school children at Greenshields, a pleasant whist drive was held on Friday evening with a good crowd in attendance. At the close of card playing a little dance was enjoyed by all.

The winners were:
Ladies—Miss L. Morrison, 1; Mrs. J. Hill, 2; Miss M. Moreton, 3.
Gents—Messrs J. Hill, 1; P. Patterson, 2; and L. Parnell, 3.

DENNY'S "CALIFORNIA STRAIGHT AHEAD" IS LATEST SPED FILM

Reginald Denny becomes the 1925' pioneer of the open road in 'California Straight Ahead', his latest starring feature, which is at the theatre for Wed. and Thurs. next week.

In this picture, which first night audiences hailed as one of the star's best, Denny sets forth for a motor trip across the continent in an elaborately constructed trailer.

The trailer had been built for his honeymoon, but the honeymoon didn't come off. He showed up late for his wedding and his bride wouldn't marry him because she thought he'd been drinking.

That starts Denny off on a picture packed full of strange situations, laughs, adventures, thrills and laughs, which makes 'California Straight Ahead' one of the funniest light comedies of the season.

Though the motor trip and the attendant adventures may be a bit more stirring than the usual tourist's journey, at least more people would be tempted to set forth in the automobiles if they were first going through all the things Denny did.

As in his other recent pictures, Reginald Denny proves that he is a versatile, accomplished comedian, and his performance rivals his characterization of the hypochondriac in 'Oh, Doctor!'

He is admirably supported by Gertrude Olmsted as leading woman, who finally agrees to marry the hero because he will not let her do anything else.

DRAMATIC RECITAL BY ELSIE McLUHAN ENJOYABLE AFFAIR

On Friday evening last at the Wainwright United Church, Miss Elsie McLuhan the dramatic reader, who is not unknown to Wainwright audiences gave another of her splendid evening entertainments to a fair gathering.

Hard though it would be to single out, possibly her dramatic tenor was in "The Lure of the Lark" made her a star of the best of a wonderfully pleasing repertoire, all of which were received with unbounded applause. During the evening, local artists rendered musical numbers in their usual gratifying manner, and encores were ungrudgingly given by all. Mrs. G. Pybus acted as accompanist.

The full programme was as follows: Piano duet—March aux flambeaux—Mesdames Pybus and Telford. Readings—How the Lark came to be lost.

"Toast to the L.A." "Should women propose?" Miss Elsie McLuhan.

Vocal Solo—"The garden of my heart."

"The Teal." Mrs. W. Clark.

Readings—"Handful of clay" "A Rose" "Ashes of Roses" Miss Elsie McLuhan.

Violin Solos—"Spring Serenade" "Cavalleria Rusticana" Mr. Alex. Adams.

Readings—"The Friends" "The lady who lives next door." "The florist's shop" "The way" "The Jan of Beyond" Miss Elsie McLuhan.

Vocal Solo—"Where the Cedars stand" "Honeyuckle and bee" "Wild bird" Mr. Geo. Hudson.

God save the King.

SCHOOL FAIRS ASSOC. HOLD MEETING TO ARRANGE EXHIBITION

A meeting of the Wainwrights district school fair association was held on Saturday last in the Council chamber, when the annual election of officers for the ensuing term took place.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and on a motion they were adopted.

The financial report of the past year's work was presented to the meeting, and was adopted as read.

The election of officers then took place with the following results: Hon. pres.—The Inspector of Wainwright S.D.

Hon. vice-pres.—The chairman of each school board represented in the association.

Pres.—D. Rattray.

Vice-pres.—G. Hollinshead.

Sec.—Treas.—S. Bowerman.

The executive committee will consist of the president, vice-president and one member from each school district.

It was resolved that the prize money be paid to winners on the day of the fair if possible, and that the fair date be set for September 10th next at the Wainwright school.

The fees for joining the association were set at $15.00 for each school represented and the meeting then adjourned.

ST PATRICK'S DANCE DRAWS BIG CROWD TO ELITE THEATRE

The time-honored "St. Patrick's Day" celebration would hardly be complete without such a celebration as was given at the masquerade dance on Thursday evening last in the theatre, and the affair proved a truly enjoyable one for the large crowd who attended.

Many representations of every kind served to set off in color and gaiety the prettily decorated dance hall, and with the Scott orchestra playing the latest and jazziest in tunes everyone entered with zest into the spirit of the occasion.

Among the splendid "masques" Dr. Wallace's splendidly voiced "Skeleton" stood out as one of the finest novelty representations ever seen, and to be seen commingling during the festivities were: Fairies, 'My Old Dutch' (costermongers), Follies, Huggin' Girl, Negro Bride, Clippies, Clowns, etc.

ANOTHER BIG DIAMOND RING CONTEST AT CORK'S

As evidence of the popularity of the contest which Mr. Earl Cork conducted last Christmas we learn that commencing on Saturday next, another big contest will commence at this store. This will be far and away the largest undertaking of the kind ever seen in our town, no less than eleven diamond rings ranging in value from $200 down to $20, in addition to many other prizes of value being in the final awards. It should be understood that the contest includes only cash paid for purchases and repairs in the store, and that there can be no transference of votes between candidates. Also—but there, get a circular from the Cork jewelry store; it is all fully explained.

From sawdust and other mill waste a material known as 'wood flour' has been prepared and is now being employed in the manufacture of many useful articles. Among them are inlaid linoleum, dynamic and dolls.

TEACHERS PREPARE FOR SUMMER SCHOOL IN LONG VACATION

For many years the Department of Education of the Province has made provision for a Summer School during the long vacation. Approximately five hundred teachers take advantage of the opportunity thus afforded and spend five weeks in intensive study.

In this way they are able to improve their academic and professional standing, come in contact with some of the outstanding instructors of the province and keep mentally alert, all under the most delightful conditions.

Teachers of all people, must avoid falling into ruts. The nature of their work is such that only fresh points of view and fresh modern material will insure service of high quality year after year. The supply of qualified teachers in Canada today exceeds the demand. Only the better trained more alert candidates, and those with desirable positions are to be filled. Professionally it is desirable to keep up continuous growth; economically it is wise to be equipped for the larger opportunity when it offers.

MR. W. KNOWLES CHAIRMAN OF NEW MUNI. HOSPITAL BD.

Best Music In New YorkOrchestra Leader Declares Former Haunt of Freaks Has ChangedNew York City.—Where can you hear the best music in New York City? Why, in Greenwich Village, of course! That is what all the highbrows are saying this year. And this is in spite of the fact that Greenwich Village used to have the reputation for the wildest, least-musical music in the city.It's all come about through the change in the Village itself.
Frank Farrell, who leads the orchestra at the Greenwich Village Inn, says:
"The Village these days is the heart of the culture, the highbrow, if you choose to call it that. The days when you could palm off just anything on the Village as long as you called it a novelty seem to be gone forever."

The new Village is getting back to the old time when to live in Greenwich Village meant that you were a member of the oldest and most cultured families in the East. That was before the shams and shams of Oakleigh and Timbuctoo came along with their bats and long cigarette holders."What has happened to them, nobody seems to know. Perhaps they have moved up on Riverside Drive or Park Avenue. At any rate, Greenwich Village is again becoming a place of homes and good taste. So much is this true that even visitors from uptown are different. The wild ones go to the Broadway night clubs.

The ones who are seeking amusement that is always in good taste come to the Village and instead of just hear 'Beulah a Garden Wall' and kindred numbers."Mr. Farrell's success has been so marked that a commercial organization in Cincinnati has run a special telephone wire to New York to put his concerts on the air.THE BLACK

"No use meeting me in that spirit Phil," said John. "His voice was kind;
it was impossible not to feel pity for the broken man who faced him.
Phil—I want you to understand, if you can, that I'm here as your friend.
I know much more than you think I do. I know of your real relation to this road—and to Henry Jordan. I know that you are not actually and morally responsible for much that has been going on—though there's little doubt as to your legal accountability.""What—yes—I know you're my friend—always were. But I've ever had—old John! John—what ever do you want me to do?"
"I want you to cut away from Jordan.
I want you to agree to tell me the truth. To answer, fully and frankly any and all the questions I may have to ask you. If you will do that—I can save you. I may be able to stop any criminal prosecution.""I'm not so interested in punishing anyone for what has happened as I am in making sure that nothing of this sort ever happens again. These people are dead—to send you and a dozen others to jail—""To send you to jail," John repeated mercilessly, "cannot restore them to life. But it is possible to save the lives of others. If you will give me a full true statement in reply to some questions and if you will satisfy me that every possible step is being taken to put the road in such shape that no so-called accident as this can happen again—why, then I may be able, consistently with my duty as district attorney, to refrain from causing your indictment. What do you say?""I—I don't know," said Phil, wretchedly. "I—must—I have to see you. You needn't tell me," said John.
Where is he?""He's in New York—but he's on his way—he's driving up in his car—"
"A wiseman," said John, scornfully.the hands of the President and his subordinates. I have every confidence in them and their ability.President Hardin informs me that the tragic and deeply regrettable accident of last night is already being investigated. Pending the outcome of that investigation it would be idle for me to discuss its causes or to speculate upon them. But I can, and will, say that I am convinced that the investigation will show that this was one of those accidents that no human foresight could have averted."Cold impassive, unmoved by the gloomy atmosphere of the building, Jordan made his way to Phil Hardin's office. He found Phil white and shaking. He glared at him contemptuously."Better take a drink!" he said. "Man —you look as if you'd seen a ghost!
Brace up! This is no time for philippines!""You haven't been here," said Phil.
"You don't know what it's been like I've been afraid to go out. I think they'd lynch me if they dared.""Don't be a fool," said Jordan, angrily. "You've lost your nerve. What are you afraid of? You've no personal responsibility in this wreck.""Hardin thinks I have—says I have," said Phil. "Mr. Jordan—I want you to know about that—about Ballard's coming here—""Ballard, eh?" Jordan's voice was like ice. "If I'd gone to him myself ten years ago instead of trusting you, like a fool, he'd be in our employ right now. What's he up to?"Phil told him of John Ballard's coming and his threats."I see," said Jordan. "Think he's bluffing Phil?""He never bluffed in his life. Mr.
Jordan. It's not in his game.""What's the big idea then? Is he trying to hold us up? He's got a good chance to do that if that's what he's after. I'm prepared to admit that much.""I wish that were all it came to!"
said Phil. "No John's straight as a string. You've got to understand that and act on that idea, Mr. Jordan. Do you know what I think? I think we've got to do as he says. Clean up. Put the road in shape. We—I can't face the possibility of more preventable wrecks.""You talk like a fool," said Jordan angrily. "If you think I'm going to let any backwoods district attorney bluff me into altering carefully defined and well thought out policies, you're mistaken. Can't you see what would mean for us to come out now and say we were going to put the road into first class shape? Why it would be an admission that we'd been neglectful before. We'd be lucky after all to escape with a three or four million dollar bill for damages—""The road is a mess," said Phil. "It's a limit to what they could bleed us for that wreck alone—to say nothing of all the pendin' damage suits in other cases.""I'd rather have it that way than go to jail—""You're not going to jail. No one's going to jail. Make up your mind to that. This man Ballard is going to be headed off. I've been up against this sort of thing before. Phil. Men like Ballard are all alike. There's a weak spot somewhere—it's simply a question of plugging away until we find it. Now—let's look into the case of this vicious young man. You know him. Pay attention to me. How does he stand about women?""He's got a clean record. I'm sure of that. He told me ten years ago—at the very time I tried to get him to come with us—that he was in love with a girl, but he couldn't afford to marry her. That was one of the reasons I was almost certain he would come to us. But he didn't. As you know, and he's never married.""H'm! And you believe he's never had anything to do with women?
Perhaps—but you've got to show me!
It's against nature, Phil. We'll look into that. I want to see Raymond later—we'll have this purity boy shadowed for awhile and see what turns up. Though, I'll grant you, he'll probably have sense enough to watch his step for awhile at least. Know anything to his discredit at all?""No. I don't. And I don't believe you'll ever dig anything up either.""We'll see. Send for Raymond!" Steve Raymond came promptly.Jordan's orders in that building were always quickly executed. Steve big, black, moustached, handsome, in a coarse way was head of the Secret Service of the N. Y. and C. V. R. R.
His was after perfectly legitimate work; a great railway needs a detective service as a city does. But, often, too, Steve sent his men out on tasks it would have been disastrous to have come to public knowledge."How about Ballard's district attorney, Steve?" said Jordan. Got anything on him?""Not a thing chief—and we've been trying. We got word to look him up when he was first elected, and lately since there's been so much beefing about the road, and I got an idea that this bird might try to start something I've had a couple of men on again."

"No results?" Jordan glared.

"Not yet. No women. Home and in-bed by eleven or so every night of his life. Doesn't drink—used to a little before prohibition but won't touch aBe Sure You Get The Genuine GILLETTE'S FLAX LYEdrop now. Tells his friends he can't afford to—that as sure as he took a drink he'd be caught at it, and somebody's trying to hold him up for what he can do.""A wise young man, eh, Steve?" he said."I'll tell the world he is! He's sure covered his tracks. It's not much that gets away from us when we go after a man, you know, Mr. Jordan.""I used to think so," said Jordan pointedly. "Come, come, Steve—this is silly. Do you mean to stand there and tell me that you actually haven't been able to pin anything on a man of Ballard's age? It's absurd! Of course he's done something wrong. Every man as old as that has. Why, even President Hardin here—""Mr. Hardin?" Steve laughed his great laugh. "Why give me a couple of hours and I'll turn up enough stuff on Mr. Hardin to have him jumping into the river to swim after the last boat for South America. But this Ballard's a tough nut to crack. Mr.
Jordan, take it from me.""Nothing there eh? How far back have you gone?""All the way. Clear back, back to when he was in high school here.""You're wasting time," said Phil, in sneering indignation. "I tell you I know the man, and you're never going to anywhere going after him that way.""H'm," said Jordan. He looked Raymond in the eye. He is likely to do anything.""Well now, I don't know that I'd say likely, Mr. Jordan," he said. "You know as well as I do that you're asking a lot. The district attorney of a county like this is a hard man, to frame. If he were an assemblyman, now or even a congressman, I'd turn up something in twenty-four hours.
But this bird's got a force working for him. If you ask me—""I'm only asking you one thing and one thing only," said Jordan. "I want information that will enable us to shoot Ballard up.""Well I can't do more than try," said Raymond. "Hold on a minute!"
"I'll—but—oh, no—that wouldn't be any good—""What? What were you thinking of?" "Well, I know—I do remember something John was mixed up in years ago—but I was in it too—he was doing me a good turn—I couldn't use that—""Suppose you let me be the judge of that Phil?" said Jordan, icily. "I will ask you to consider your own position. One thing is definite. This man's demands will not be met. You know better than I whether, if they are or not, he will carry out his threat and whether he will have mercy on you.""You have a weapon we can use."
"You—""I haven't said that—I only thought for a second—""I know you too well Phil. I've known you all your life—for a while I've been able to use."His voice rang out sharp and cold; it was like the crack of the whip."Phil—you hold out on me now you're out—you're through as President of the N. Y. and C. V. That's one thing I'll issue a statement holding you personally responsible for the conditions that have led up to this wreck. If you attempt to deny anything I'll publish facts enough about you to make your name a byword.
Now—what do you know about Ballard?"Phil, trembling, terrified, reeled before the merciless attack. Jordan watched him, contempt in his eyes.
He had no doubt of the issue. Jordan was without scruples, but he had the courage of his own viciousness, and he hated a coward."I—why—it was something that happened in our senior year—"And, faltering, his hands and voice shaking he told the story of the brawl at Honest Pete O'Brien's—when John Ballard had saved his. Phil Hardin's life had struck down with a chair the gambler who was about to stab him."Getting this Steve?" said Jordan.
"Get the date—have your men getbusy. Find any witnesses. Cover the hold field. This will do it—murder, by God, Murder—they were breaking a law—""Maybe not murder but manslaughter anyway. And no statute of limitations runs for murder!" said Raymond, darkly exulting. "This'll do it Chief. But by golly they must have kept it pretty dark I went through the records of the time Ballard was in college with a finetooth comb, and there was nothing like this. Not that I'd have hooked it up with him, but I was looking for anything there was even an outside chance he might be mixed up in.""Never mind all that—the point is that we know about it now, and we're going to make use of it," said Jordan.
"Now Phil—""But—whatever he did he did it to save my life!" said Phil. "You can't expect me to use that against him now—"Jordan laughed scornfully.
"You'll use it all right," he said.
"And there's no time to waste. You'll go to him now—today, and tell him about this. Steve you get busy—the thing might get beyond him—see what I mean? Get to the point where he couldn't stop it, even to save himself."

WAINWRIGHT, ALBERTA MARCH 23rd, 1927

ST. PATRICK

Yearly on March 17, Irishmen the world over are doing honor to Ireland's patron saint. Because he wrought most manfully for God, the name of St. Patrick is immortal in history. His is fame won in the service of eternal Omnipotence, a name known that must be more lasting and more living than the glory of having served in the advance of perishable ideals. That is why the name of Ireland's saint seems still to be a breathing thing, still impressing Patrick's qualities, still imposing his ideals on Catholic men or women, while countless mighty figures in even more recent history have left a name that emptied its aspiration into the graves that hold their dust. Ireland's hills know him best, yet every country of the Irish race's adoption knows him well. In the inspiration breathed by St. Patrick's memory, there stand out particularly the unbreakable strength of his manly purpose, and the veritable fire of his unquenchable fidelity. While still a boy he was deprived of home and friends by cruel captors. He rubbed his shoulders with hard men. Was made to suffer and at the same time serve exacting task-masters. His surroundings were pagan. Where the most of men might have weakened, he was not discouraged. He prayed the prayers of a boy already a saint. When released, liberty and home might have suggested themselves as a well-earned reward for his hardships. But he rejected the reward and laboriously prepared himself to go back to serve the souls of the pagans who had been his task-masters. And now, self-imposed, he is suffering the place of his boyhood sorrows. Hence the wonderful spectacle of one man meriting to be the mean of enlightening, spiritually and intellectually, a whole people, and through its dissemination, of doing much towards the redemption of the peoples in every corner of the world.

In the matter of their faith, the sons of St. Patrick have well learned his lesson of strong fidelity. On the far flung borders of the Church, where liberty is tempting, Patrick's lesson needs to be well preserved in the heart—also come themselves in bondage, to doubt and darkness, instead of sweetly yoked with the truth that makes men free. He who became Ireland's saint, had he accepted the pleasure of home and freedom after trails so hard, would have found himself in the bonds of selfish pleasure, instead of cheerfully working in the yoke of a wonderful vocation, that kept him a zealous apostle over half a century.—Calgary Herald.

GONE, GONE FOREVER!!

Did you ever stop to realize, folks, that when you send a dollar on its way out of your community it is gone forever and can in no way help your community. Of course you did not think of it—the same with lots of others. On the other hand, when the dollar is spent at home, it is bound to have a good effect right where it is spent and that good effect is bound to have a reaction that will benefit you as well as your neighbors. It is a simple bit of truth and the wonder is that it should be necessary for us to mention it at all—the truth seems to be so evident. Yet it is necessary, for we all know that altogether too many of our dollars go out of the community for things we can buy at home. If you don't know it just ask your postmaster to let you have a look at the inside of his parcel department. You will see parcels piled high from mail order houses and thousands of miles away, addressed to your neighbors. Their good dollars have been sent away out of your community for these parcels; sent to some one who has no personal interest in your community, who do not pay one cent of taxes there, never contribute to a subscription list, don't support and help keep up schools, churches, or contribute to the upkeep of roads, etc. If your whole community were to smash together it wouldn't matter to them because their interests are elsewhere.

Surely to goodness, folks, you can see the writing on the wall if you continue this practice. Then why not do the right thing by your home town merchants. Give them every chance to figure on your requirements whether it be for one piece of merchandise or a carload. Work for your own community and by so doing you are working for your own benefit.

Make your slogan—MY COMMUNITY FIRST!—and then you will be steering in the sure direction of success.

Suppose Your Car Was Stolen

Could you identify your car if it had been stolen and recovered by the police? You could? But that is what all owners say. And yet when they see their bus—what they think is their car—in the police garage, why it is ten to one but that they cannot identify it. The police prove it time and time again.

As a matter of fact, most car owners depend for identification on some scratch on the body, some broken screw in the chassis or some other equally uncertain factor. They do not stop to consider that our bus manufacturers are turning out models in ten thousand lots that differ from each other in not the slightest discernible degree. By the time a successful thief has run a stolen car through his 'service station' it would puzzle the most careful owner on earth to identify his vehicle.

The only safe method of placing identification marks on a car is to place them on all major parts of the mechanism. Perhaps the most satisfactory method of doing so is to place punch marks on the various units. All such marks should be in places where they will not be readily discernible; for instance, on the inside of the axles, on the flywheels, on the upper side of the gear housing. After the marks have been made they should be rubbed over with grease until they are nearly indistinguishable as possible. The car owner can have a punch made with his initials on it in very fine type and with this it is possible to place identification marks on the various parts that will generally escape notice and yet remain permanent.

Another clever idea is to bore a few small holes a mere fraction of an inch into the framework at a given place carefully measured from permanently located landmark. Then fill these holes with lead and smear the spot well with grease. If there comes a time when it is necessary to identify the car, it is a simple matter to measure off the proper distance, scrape a little lead off and prove ownership of the car.

The individual owner can probably find a dozen distinctive ways of marking his car for possible identification, but the point is that this should be done, because when a car has been stolen the police demand something more than say-so on the part of the owner before they return it to him.

General Motors today announces an entirely new line of Pontiac Sixes, notably enhanced in beauty, incorporating numerous refinements in design, carrying new low prices—and constituting the most electrifying development in the low-priced six field since the original Pontiac Six!

New Fisher Body

Never before in any low-priced six have been achieved such commanding beauty and luxury. The new bodies by Fisher are longer, lower and superbly executed.

All New Duco Colors

To emphasize their inherent smartness, all body types are finished in new combinations of Duco colors.

New Beauty and Style

Pontiac Six beauty has always been outstanding. But now in these new and finer models has been achieved not only new beauty, but also an arresting rakishness—the result of a deeper radiance; larger, heavier, and more sweeping crown fenders; and more massive headlamps. Windshield now are narrowed to conform to the accepted custom-built vogue and to provide a wider area of visibility. Window ledges are smartly recessed and finished in a contrasting color.

"UNSEEN HAND" ON THROTTLE AVERTS WRECK

Can you imagine a train thundering over the rails at a speed of eighty-five miles an hour, approaching a red danger signal and coming to a halt with the engineer sitting motionless in his cab without attempting to stop the train?

You wouldn't believe it possible, but the Philadelphia and Reading railroad gave such a demonstration recently of its new train-control system, by which it is hoped to make railway service practically fool-proof, says Popular Mechanics Magazine.

The system enforces obedience to signals and compliance with speed regulations. It applies the brakes automatically, if the engineer exceeds eighty-five miles an hour, or when he goes about forty miles an hour, when caution signals are against him, and again when he travels more than twenty-five miles an hour under danger signals.

A broken rail or open switch ahead will cause a brake application. If the engineer does not comply with all signal indications and speed regulations, the brakes will bring the train to a stop. Any time the system of equipment fails, the train will be brought to a halt.

A device included in a steel box and attached to the locomotive, is operated by an electric current flowing through the rails, which are divided into sections or blocks, each 4,000 feet long. Contact is made by receivers suspended from the front of the locomotive, six inches above the rails, by induction. The electricity travels to the equipment case, containing relays, radio-amplifying tubes, where it is stepped up to high voltage and carried to the braking system.

This train control also provides the engineer with a continuous, visible indicator in the cab, from which to determine at all times what speed he may run. Any changes in the condition of the track ahead of him are instantly registered on his cab indicator in sufficient time to enable him to increase or decrease his speed. In short, when the indicator shows an "H" (high speed), he may run at eighty-five miles an hour; when it shows an "M" (medium speed), he may run at forty miles an hour; and when "L" (low speed) appears, he must keep his speed within twenty-five miles an hour.

If something unforeseen happens ahead of the train, instant warning is given and the brakes will be automatically applied. The train-control system is operated in conjunction with automatic block signaling, thus regulating the speed of the train to conform with signal indications. So long as the engineer complies with the signals, the control of the train is left entirely in his hands, but should he fail to recognize them, the system takes hold and either stops the train or reduces its speed. In such cases it applies the brakes but never releases them.

After the brakes have been applied, the engineer has to release them by operating the acknowledging valve, to prove he is alert and in full possession of his faculties. The brakes hold for forty seconds, before they can be released, thus insuring that the train will be brought below the required speed limit.

Such, then, is the system of the automatic train control. Should the engineerman die or fall out of his cab, there is no danger of a wreck, killing or injuring passengers riding in a train so equipped.

SEEDING DOWN TO GRASS AND CLOVERS

The system adopted at the Scott Experimental Station is to seed down with oats on spring ploughing after taking off two crops of wheat. The wheat stubble is ploughed from five to six inches deep as early as possible in the spring, packed, harrowed and drilled within two weeks. The rate of seeding per acre consists of two bushels of oats, twelve pounds of western rye grass and six pounds of sweet clover seed. The method of the grass and the clover seed with the oats is to dump a two bushel sack of oats on the floor put on top, twelve pounds of rye grass seed and six pounds of clover seed. The pile is shoveled over a few times and, sowed, then another two bushels is dumped on the floor and the mixture operation replicated until sufficient of the mixture is available to sow the desired acreage.

Rye grass is of the same shape as oats and therefore feeds quite readily when mixed with oats, but owing to the bulky nature of the rye grass seed the drill has to be opened wider to get the required amount of seed per acre. When sowing the drill is actually set to sow two bushels and three pecks of oats and the mixture is sown a notch shallower than when drilling oats.

Rye oats is a native of the prairie and the Scott Station has not failed to get a stand in the past fifteen years by the method outlined above. Rye grass yields higher than Bromus and is preferred because it is easier to eradicate when broken from soil by reason of not having underground root stalks.

Arctic Sweet Clover is preferred to the Common White Blossom because it is harder and starts growth earlier in the spring. Grazier Rye Grass will stand pasturing in a dry season better than the ordinary rye grass.

Seed of both rye grass and Arctic Sweet Clover may be obtained from the Saskatchewan Seed Growers Association at Regina. A copy of their price list may be obtained by writing to the Scott Station or to the Association at Regina.

It is advisable to inoculate the Sweet Clover Seed before sowing. The culture may be obtained by writing to the Bacteriological Department, Experimental Farm, merely stating the quantity of sweet clover to be sown and the culture for inoculating will be sent free with instructions for using.

Further detailed information may be had by writing the Superintendent of the Scott Experimental Station.

THE CARE OF THE BABY TEETH

Paradoxically speaking, the care of the baby's teeth should begin before they arrive.

A soft cloth should be used daily to cleanse the gums and keep them healthy before the coming of the little teeth.

Symptoms of tooth eruption in the young child are, as a rule, not lacking. Locally there will be slight inflammation with swellings; the area in which the tooth will erupt showing a tenderness and shininess of tissue. The child will exhibit a tendency to bite anything such as its toes, fingers, etc., and evidence a general irritability and restlessness, accompanied, possibly, by a slight fever.

Should the eruption of the tooth seem too tardy and cause the child considerable pain, the family dentist should be consulted.

As soon as the first tooth has erupted the use of the mouth cloth should be supplemented by the use of brush, using clear water in the daily brushing. Later, when the child has reached the age when it will not swallow everything that is put in its a little good dental cream may be put on the brush.

However, along with these efforts, attention should be given to a correct dict, and when the parent should insist on proper mastication of its food, by the child.

Little children should not be allowed to eat candy or other sweets; they are ruinous to the young teeth.

It would not be too early to take the child to the dentist at two and a half or three years of age, and thereafter at intervals of from three to six months, as may prove necessary. In this way, small cavities can be detected early and treated with practically no discomfort to the child, and so the teeth are preserved from further and extensive decay.

There is a phrase respecting motherhood "for every child a tooth" which is to say that during the period of formation of the little life change takes place in the mother's teeth, causing them to decay and be more easily lost. And this is so! But why?

For the reason of the little structure, the little bone-builders in their construction of the bones and teeth, depend chiefly on the calcium salts. Should the mother's diet be deficient in these building-stones, the little workmen are obliged to go to the only other available sources of supply, the bones and teeth, to meet their wants. Robbing Peter to pay Paul—if you will yet the little structures must be reared at altitudes.

In such a case the mother's teeth are so structurally weakened as to invite disease.

Not only to avert this disaster to herself but keeping upmost the welfare of the coming child, and remembering that she must contribute generously towards the influence that will make normally developed teeth in her offspring, the expectant mother should select her diet with the utmost care. Hence she should choose plenty of lime-containing foods—milk, eggs, cereals, the leafy-topped vegetables and fresh fruits.

Following birth also, the demand for calcium in the mother's diet is still high, since, with the infant feeding naturally as it should, the mother's milk requires large amounts of these salts. An inadequate diet on the mother's part certainly affects harmfully her own teeth as well as those developing in the nursing child.

Moreover, it should be stressed that the teeth are to be of good quality the infant should at this time be naturally fed. The ravages of decay have been found to be much greater among children who as infants had been artificially fed.

The expectant mother should take at least a quart of milk a day in addition to her other food. This will ensure a proper start of the teeth in the jaws of the infant at birth, and as well the proper body development of the child generally.

DO WEEDS MATTER

WE'LL SAY THEY DO

Perfectly obvious facts sometimes need concrete illustration to make them impressive. What for instance could be more obvious than the simple fact that the crowding of a crop by weeds, reduces the yield, or conversely, that judicious expenditure of labor or money upon the destruction of the weeds must return dividends in the enhanced value of the crop?

And yet, because the crowding seldom ruins a crop entirely, and the weeding seldom removes more than a fraction of the weeds, we lapse into the easy philosophy that the difference it makes is negligible anyhow.

The real truth stands forth stark and bold, confronted by an object lesson like the following. On one of our Experimental Stations last summer a plot of hemp, badly infested with wild radish (similar to wild mustard) was treated on half its area with cyanamid dust. The weed insofar as it escaped immediate destruction received such a set back that the hemp at once took the lead and for the rest of the season smothered any dwarfed competitors that might have regained vigor. On the adjoining area the untreated wild radish got the lead and held it so effectively that in the second week of August the hemp was only half the height of that along side, and the weed was rapidly maturing a crop of seed. In this particular instance the fertilizing value of the cyanamid to the crop was doubtless aiding its herbicidal action on the weed, to make a striking contrast; but the same result in varying degree must follow elimination of competition by weeds however secured.

It is open to any farmer who has fields polluted with wild mustard or wild radish to provide himself with a similar object lesson next spring on such a scale as may be according to his means. Cyanamid happens to have been the agent used, but other preparations on the market, like Hoyer's Calcium Chloride for dusting, and iron sulphate or copper sulphate (Blue stone) for spraying, may be used. Essentials for success are, application early in the life of the weed, well before full bloom, even distribution of the material in correct amount, and in the early morning of a bright day. Fuller directions will be furnished on application to the Division of Botany. These remedies can be safely used in cereal or grass crops, but not in clover; and it should go without saying that they are unnecessary in crops that can be cleaned by tillage or by late spring cultivation before sowing.

WHO IS THIS GAL-ETHAL

Much has been written in the east about Ethyl. Only recently has she gone west. Now, West Coast papers have crowded Menthyl off the front page to make way for Ethyl. Who is Ethyl?

In appearance Ethyl-gas fluid is champagne-colored. Before it is placed into special containers it is colored red, for the purpose of making it easily recognizable. It has a pungent odor of its own.

In dwelling on the peculiar virtues of ethyl-gas fluid it should be understood that the fluid does not make high-test gasoline of low-volatility fuel. Indeed it does not add power to the gasoline proper. Rather does its action become apparent in the manner in which it changes the conditions under which the fuel is consumed in the engine.

Ordinary gasoline acts with the detonating, short-lived force of black powder; ethyl gas develops its energy like the smokeless powder in that it burns progressively throughout the passage of the piston through the cylinder.

Ethyl-gas in high-compression engines showed a flexibility approaching that of the steam-engine, a high-gear climbing ability that was a revelation an utter freedom from knocking that was truly astonishing.

Motorists or repairmen who have occasion to remove the heads of engines in which ethyl gas has been used for a prolonged period are quite apt to misinterpret what they see. A valve taken from such an engine presents an unfamiliar appearance and may be taken for a badly burned valve. It is only necessary to paint these deposits black to recognize their nature, whereas a short soaking in a sodium dioxide solution readily dissolves the deposits and shows the metal beneath unaffected.

The lead component leaves a light deposit of its own; this does not accumulate beyond a thin coating at some of this deposit enters between a valve and its seat—the case of carbon a decidedly undesirable happening—the ethyl deposits, far from being a menace, become an advantage in sealing up the slight leaks to which valves are subject after prolonged running.

What does it all mean? I am certain that engine builders and motorists are facing the advent of the long-sought but hitherto unattainable high-compression and economical fuel consumption, will develop great power. If we now utilize only five per cent of the gasoline energy the additional five per cent achieved by the use of ethyl gas in high compression engines will double the efficiency of the gasoline engine. More than that, it will double the power we may obtain from our gasoline resources, together with the life of our engines and make the car a greater boon than ever.

Ladies—For your afternoon or evening parties we have score cards for Court, Whist and Progressive Whist ready printed at The Star office.

NOT merely to provide an economical means of transportation has been the aim in the making of the Most Beautiful Chevrolet—but to produce a car, at low price, which would satisfy the motorist's fast tastes. True distinction is evident in every line of the Fisher-Built Bodies of the Most Beautiful Chevrolet in Chevrolet History. Refinement and good taste are reflected in the new Daco colorings—in the rich, luxurious upholstery—in the handsome new radiator design—in the massive full-crown fenders—in the fine-quality hardware—in the completeness of the appointments.

As there is the quality of the thoroughbred in the appearance of the Most Beautiful Chevrolet in Chevrolet History, so there is the same quality in its performance. New refinements, added to the smooth, powerful Chevrolet engine (the New A.C. Air Cleaner and Oil Filter, for example) offer definite assurance of longer life, better operation and greater economy.

The Most Beautiful Chevrolet in Chevrolet History is now selling at NEW and LOWER PRICES than the lowest for which Chevrolet has ever been sold in Canada.

How to Play BRIDGE

A new series of lessons by Wynne Ferguson
Author of "PRACTICAL AUCTION BRIDGE"

ARTICLE No. 15

The question is often asked: "What type of hand is the best?" The answer is: "It depends on the position of the hand and the strength of the hand." The strongest hand is the one that can win the most tricks. The weakest hand is the one that can lose the most tricks. The best hand is the one that can win the most tricks and lose the least tricks. The worst hand is the one that can lose the most tricks and win the least tricks. The best hand is

The worst hand is the one that the one that can lose the most tricks and win the least tricks.

Presumptive bids as a rule should be avoided and only handled by players who understand why and when to make them. They are apt to react on the bidder and be a source of loss, rather than gain. If handled at all, they should be used with great discretion.

The best and worst of the previous article, is a freak, and most anybody could happen to it. It is as follows:

Answer to Problem No. 12

Hearts—K, Q, J, 10, 9, 8, 7, 6, 5, 4, 3, 2, A Clubs—A, K, Q, J, 10, 9, 8, 7, 6, 5, 4, 3, 2, A Diamonds—A, K, Q, J, 10, 9, 8, 7, 6, 5, 4, 3, 2, A

Hearts—A, 5, 7, 6, 5, 3, 2
Clubs—A, 5, 7, 6, 5, 3, 2
Diamonds—A, 5, 7, 6, 5, 3, 2
Spades—none

Diamonds—A, 5, 7, 6, 5, 3, 2
Spades—A, 5, 7, 6, 5, 3, 2

No score, first game. Z should bid one diamond. It is hardly a sound original bid but the hand is too strong to pass.
A should bid one heart. Y then has the choice of bidding two clubs or one no-trump. If he bids one no-trump, he loses the game. If he bids two clubs, he wins the game. If he bids one no-trump, he loses the game. If he bids two clubs, he wins the game. If he

If he bids two clubs, he wins the game.
If he bids one no-trump, he loses the game. If he bids two clubs, he wins the game. If he bids one no-trump, he loses the game. If he bids two clubs, he wins the game. If he bids one no-trump, he loses the game.

Problem No. 19
Hearts—Q, 8, 7, 6
Clubs—A, 10, 9, 8, 7, 6, 5, 4, 3, 2, A

Spades—K, 10, 9, 8, 7, 6, 5, 4, 3, 2, A

No score, rubber game. Z dealt and bid one spade. If A doubled one spade (in-

B bid? Should he bid one no-trump or two hearts? An analysis of this interesting hand and of the principles underlying the information double will be given in the next article.

DIAMOND EXPRESS THE BLACK

scare into the big stiff right away," said Raymond. "By golly, there's only something on every man, if you only dig deep enough, ain't there? Never knew it to fail."

"But I can't feel like a skunk—" said Phil.
"What do you think I care for your feelings?" said Jordan. "You'll do as you're told. You food—it's as much for your own sake as mine. We're all in this thing—if this man Ballard gets started there's no telling where this scandal will stop. We may all land in the penitentiary. Now, listen to me."

"This is what you're to do. You're to go to him at once and tell him what you know—and that you've told it to me and that investigation has already begun. He's lawyer enough to know whether or not he's in any personal danger. From what you tell me I think there's no doubt of it—eh Steve?"

"I'd say there wasn't, Mr. Jordan," said Steve. "Especially with his running away and keeping quite the way he did. I don't say we could send him up for it, but we could hound him out of office. That's a cinch. He's got a lot of enemies, and he's only got one newspaper in the whole town on his side."

"Exactly," said Jordan. "And I don't care whether he goes to jail —discrediting him and anything he does will be enough. I don't even want to do that if he'll be reasonable.
Tell him that Phil. Tell him that we'll work in with him to save his face any way we can. Once he's broken in I'd as soon have him stay on as district attorney as not. Rather, I don't want any howling reformer in there that we'd have to work on. You go to him and tell him that we're willing to be friends if he is—see?"

"I wish you'd send someone else—
why can't Raymond go?"
"Because you're the man to do it!"
Jordan's fist came down on the desk with a great clash. "By God, I'm trying to be patient with you, Phil—don't drive me too far. You don't have to understand anything—your job is to be a friend to me and literally."

"For a few minutes more the feeble do as you're told."
Then he collapsed. As he had known really from the first that he must, he groveled; promised to do whatever he was told. He listened attentively to his orders, promised them to execute them at once and literally.

"See that you do!" was Jordan's parting word. "I want a report at my hotel when you've finished with Ballard—no matter what time it may be."

CHAPTER IX

Phil Hardin, sick and trembling went straight from his own office to Ballard's. But John, he was told was out and was not expected back until day. The district attorney, he was informed, had gone to the scene of the wreck to take personal charge of the investigation that was, at his order, being conducted.

"All right. Keep after him," said Jordan.

"Do you want me to go out there?"
said Phil, recalling, "I don't think I could bear that—"
"No don't go there," said Jordan.
"That would do no good. Wait till after dinner. Find him then—at home if you can. When I come to think of it, the less you seen with him the better. This thing has got to be kept quiet. It won't do for the Sun reporters to see you and Ballard hob-nob-bing. No—to-night after dinner, will be the best time."

"All right," said Phil. "I'll be anything for me to do this afternoon I feel sick. I think I'd like to go home and rest."

"Best place for you," said Jordan, contemptuously. "Go along and try to get up a little courage before you go see Ballard. You'll need it. I don't like him, but he's a man anyway—he's got guts. He's liable to pick you and break you in two if you go to him in the condition you're in now." Viola, as it chanced, was there and saw him come in. She attributed his condition to the wreck, and the criticism of him it had provoked and inspired. And, while Viola after ten years of marriage had few, if any illusions about her husband, she knew a little sorry for him now. She knew, better than most, how utterly he was in Jordan's power, and while inevitably, she despised his weakness, she knew enough of Jordan to realize the man's tremendous and crushing power and to know that a stronger man Phil might well have yielded to that tremendous will.

For Viola the marriage upon which she had entered, in haste and in ignorance, ten years ago, had turned out to be disastrous and soul crushing experience. She had known even then that she did not love Phil, but she had not suspected his true nature.
She had supposed that in time, she might come to love him.

Matinee Ladies

"MATINEE LADIES," with May McAvoy, in a Warner Bros. picture-ization of this novel.

BYOTPS18
Bob Ward, a poverty-stricken engineering student in his second year, who is working his way through college by whatever jobs he can get at the college employment bureau, is informed by his two chums, Freddy and Arch, that they have found an easy and profitable way to earn money—by working as dancing partners, of afternoons, for rich women in a fashionable New Jersey roadhouse. Bob thinks it won't be a fit way to make a living.
His landlady threatens him with eviction for unpaid rent.

CHAPTER I—Continued
As the door slammed behind Mrs. O'Sully, Bob's eyes, full of trouble, rested upon the faces of his chums.

"Now you've got to take the job, Bob!" exclaimed Freddy and Arch
in unison. "Come on, be a sport.
If you don't come, some one else will!"

Bob gulped hard. Pride went down with that gulp—pride and honest conviction. Expediency looked a hard fall out of his self-respect; even so, there was a lot of courage and stoutness, in his manner as he said quickly: "Lead me to your damned old inn. Henceforth, I'm a dancing partner for matinee ladies, young and old—at fifty per!"

"Now you're talking like an intelligent and sensible college senior, if not a human being, should talk!" chuckled Freddy, while Arch, as his outward show of joy at Bob's acceptance of the job, bounced a heavy engineering tome
on Bob's head.

This precipitated a rough and tumble skid, which brought Mrs.

O'Sully back into the room post haste with an indignant threat to eject all three boys, bag and boot,
on grounds of social undesirability, let alone financial.

Mrs. O'Sully was appeased. Then Bob asked dubiously:
"When do I start on my—err—career as a male butterfly for the delectation of the idle female rich?"

"Right away—pronto—if not sooner," declared Arch. "This afternoon. That's the only time we work. See what a chuck of a job it is! These rich and jazzy janes tell their trusting husbands who are probably keeping a couple of chorus girls apiece on a string—that they attend the matinee. Then they skip out to nearby roadhouses and jazz joints, of which our Palladium is a noteworthy example, and dance the afternoons away with young guys like us. Some of the bolder ones go to hotels in town to dance, but most of them want secrecy, and like the respectable places."

"Where is the place that I—will work?"
"Over on the Palladium. We'll beat it down to 123th street and take the Fort Lee ferry. Then it's a short ride on a bus. It's a fine come on now, get a wiggle on, old left tackle, or we'll be late for the matinee!" And the two boys, who didn't like to wait for their pretty little college boys!"

"Err—err—darned! Bob, disgusted at the sophisticated lingo in his chum's description of the job and the people.

mitted to a job as dancing entertainer.

(How Much Money Do You Lose) Each Year From Wheat Smut?

LET US HELP YOU DECREASE THIS LOSS

The losses which the average farmer and grower suffer may be decreased to a very low figure. To check the disease it is necessary to start with the seed wheat. Treatment of seed with Copper Carbonate which is a fine, fluffy product which has been made to meet the requirements and specifications of the governments of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba, is the treatment which will prevent SMUT.

The grain may be treated at any time and stored. The germination is not affected; less seed per acre; no rushing and hustling to treat seed just before planting; seed can be planted at any time; requires very little labor or expense to treat seed for large acreages with Copper Carbonate. The treatment is much more rapid than the wet method.
